By ELIZABETH HOUSE
Staff Sports Writer

At 17, Lynn Beard became an old lady — at least as far as the Community Swim Association was concerned. After many years in the CSA's summer league she had "aged out." She thought her days of competitive swimming were over.

She waited 15 years to find out she was wrong.

Beard, now 32, recently joined the Tar Heel Masters, a swim program for those 25 years of age and over. The program was started 13 years ago by a Navy doctor, and the local team was formed by Frank Clark. The Masters program was designed primarily for adults who want to stay in condition, but it also sponsors meets for those who wish to compete.

Beard joined the program with the sole idea of keeping in shape. She had tried a jazzercise program, but gave it up in favor of the local Masters team.

"When I did jazzercise, I hurt all the time," Beard said. "I was sore, and when I would do something, it would just hurt. It got to the point where I thought it couldn't be good for me if it hurt like that."

"With swimming, you're floating through the water and nothing you do hurts — except that you're tired. It's more endurance and stamina that hurting your muscles or exerting them too far."

But it wasn't easy for Beard to get back into a regular swim program.

"The hardest thing about coming back was that first lap," she said. "It was just 25 yards, and I thought I was going to die. In fact, after that first lap, I thought, 'oh, forget this. Maybe I don't really want to swim after all.'"

"But after each lap, I'd feel my stroke getting better, and my breathing was getting better, even though my heart felt like it was going to jump out of my chest."

Beard also liked the low-pressure atmosphere of the Masters practice.

"Frank says to do what you can do, so it was really up to me," Beard said. "He is never pushy. I could hang on the side and gasp for air, but I just tried to make myself keep going — to do one more lap, then one more lap."

"It really makes you feel good to swim. Sometimes I wonder if I'm going to survive, but when you've worked out and done everything you're supposed to do, it's a good feeling."

Like Beard, Ray Demkowski joined the team to keep in shape. Demkowski, 26, swam for his high school team in California, and had been swimming at the Greensboro Central YMCA when he met Clark.

"I started working out with the Masters about three months ago," Demkowski said. "I usually work out every day to stay in shape. I like working out with the team, and it's a good program. Frank is a super coach, and there are a lot of good people there."

Beard said she had no intention of swimming competitively when she joined the team. But when the 1983 North Carolina Master Long Course meet was held two weeks ago, she decided to compete.

"When I started I had no idea I was going to compete," Beard said. "When I found out about the meet, I called Frank because I was curious. He told me that the meet would have some novice classes that I could enter."

"At first, I wasn't going to enter the meet, but then I thought 'What do I have to lose?' So I entered."

Beard fared very well in her first Masters meet. She won two novice events on the first day — the 50-meter freestyle and 50-meter backstroke.

"I had no idea that I would do as well as I did," Beard said. "I got real excited, and decided to come back the next day and swim with the rest of the people."

On the meet's second day, Beard swam in two regular non-novice events, finishing third in the 50 free and fourth in the 50 breast. But she improved her time in the 50 free by nearly two seconds.

"That was funny," she said. "When I swam the freestyle in the novice event, my time was just over 38 seconds, because I was ahead,

But when I swam in the regular event, I had a lot of competition, and I really had to struggle just stay up with them. But I shaved two seconds off my time just by having the competition, and I realized that I can do more and push myself more if I have the competition."

Beard said the best thing about the Masters program is that there is something in it for everyone.

"You can compete in your age group, and there's no limit to how old you are. It's a good workout program for any age group, and it gives you a chance to do your thing in swimming without having to compete with younger people."

Beard now has two goals. Her short-term goal is to continue competing in the Masters program and win the 50-meter free and 50-meter back events for non-novices.

"I'd like to be first in the free and back, because they're my favorite strokes," she said. "I'd also like to be able to swim 200 meters of anything without being winded. I watched them swim the 1650-meter freestyle at the state meet with much admiration."

Beard's other goal?

"I'd like to still be swimming at 70."

Masters swim keeps adults fit

A fun idea for fitness that puts adults in the swim

By Joan Gillespie

SAM KOOISTRA swam on 15 national championship water polo teams for the Illinois Athletic Club, played in the '56 Olympics and was named to the All-American water polo team 13 times, but he has never had as much fun swimming as he does now.

Kooistra is a member of Masters Swimming, a national program for adults 25 and over that promotes swimming for health and fitness and sponsors competitions. Kooistra, who is chief of the Chicago Fire Department's 14th Battalion, has clocked Masters state records in the 200-yard backstroke and 100-yard, 200-yard and 1,500-meter freestyle in the last year.

"I still like to win," he says, "but it's not a matter of life and death like it was when I was younger."

Enjoyment of the water, not just for former Olympians but for everyone, ranks as one of the primary goals of Masters Swimming, according to Bobbi Turcotte, president of the Illinois Chapter of Masters Swimming and program director of the Buehler YMCA in Palatine.

Turcotte and other Masters coaches make this enjoyment possible with their common philosophy that their team members learn how to swim well and condition themselves at their own level.

"The competition is really a secondary aspect of the program," Turcotte said.

THIS PHILOSOPHY has attracted 700 swimmers to the Masters program in Illinois since it began in 1972. Many of the state's 30 registered teams are in the Chicago area at YMCAs.

Members range from young men and women who broke records in college swimming to those in middle age who were barely able to swim a lap when they entered the program.

Bunny Haversack, a member of the Buehler YMCA, is one of the latter. She had always been afraid of the water but started to take swimming lessons at the age of 55 for two reasons: a bad back and an encouraging husband who was among the founders of the Masters program.

She first swam backstroke because she did not like her face in the water. Now, 11 years later, she swims a mile four or five times a week. She thinks her experience shows that a person is never too old to learn to swim.

"I'm not fast, but I like the competition," she explains. "For me, it's really competing against myself, concentrating on my stroke, trying to improve my time."

Jane Wimer, also a member of the Buehler Y, represents the other end of the membership spectrum. A college swimmer, she was a pre-Master until she turned 25 and could join Masters. Now 28 years old, she won the 50-meter freestyle event at a national YMCA meet in May.

DESPITE THEIR different swimming backgrounds, these two women echo each other when they discuss the best things about Masters: staying in shape and socializing with other swimmers.

There is ample opportunity for both since Masters work out four or five times a week. Swimmers are divided into three classes during a workout: beginners, who may only be able to swim one length; intermediates, who are learning starts and turns and improving their style; and, the advanced, who are excellent lap swimmers.

Members of the first two classes may never compete. Likewise, some advanced swimmers may not enter competition simply because they are not interested.

This underscores many Masters' involvement for health and fitness rather than competition. Nonetheless, these swimmers think they differ from recreational swimmers because of the degree of their commitment.

Haversack explained, "If my husband and I weren't in Masters, we wouldn't work out as much. It's important to have a regular place to swim and it's even better if you're swimming with someone."

Those who want to compete do so in five-year age groups in freestyle, backstroke, breast stroke, butterfly, individual medley and relays. Masters meets follow the rules of Central U.S. Swimming, an organization established for young competitive swimmers. Masters are allowed some exceptions; for example, in butterfly competition youngsters cannot change from a butterfly kick to a breast stroke kick but Masters can.

Although Masters teams share the same purpose, each has a personality. Some teams place more emphasis on the competition than others; some have a higher percentage of older members than younger and vice versa; and some have many more male members than female.

The costs of joining a Masters team vary. Basic costs at a "Y" are the membership fee and a monthly fee that pays for practice sessions. To compete, one must buy a $10 annual membership card from Central U.S. Swimming. Registration fees for meets average $15 to $20 plus $2 per event.

For information on Masters in your area, call Bobbi Turcotte, Buehler YMCA, Palatine, 359-2400.

They're taking the plunge

Perhaps jogging has greater snob appeal. After all, once you slip on those fancy, waffle-bottomed running shoes and that velour workout suit (complete with designer's emblem), you can advertise your trendiness by trotting through the whole neighborhood.

However, the nation's No. 1 participation sport is swimming. If it is short on attire, it seems increasingly strong on adherents. An estimated 30 million Americans now swim for fitness purposes. According to some surveys, that is triple the number of joggers.

What explains swimming's big splash? One allure, especially for middle-aged "athletes," is that swimming offers excellent exercise with fewer of the nasty side-effects (e.g., sore feet and aching knees) associated with relentless jogging.

Technology has given swimming a boost, too. Watertight, lightweight goggles have ended the "pink eye" syndrome. After a swim without goggles in a chlorinated pool, a person has the look of an albino bunny (or someone nursing a terrible hangover). Goggles serve as a shield against sore eyes, while providing underwater vision and a heightened sense of aquatic serenity.

Like any physical routine, swimming can get boring. However, inventive minds are working on the problem. A Milwaukee chap even has designed a waterproof method for wearing a miniature stereo and headphones when you swim. The major difficulty for the swimming boomlet is likely to be a shortage of pool space. If the sport becomes too popular, the neighborhood natatorium may hang out signs like: "Backstroking by appointment only."

LONG COURSE NATIONALS - Our thanks to Mel Goldstein and Ivan Chalfie for arranging to allow us Masters Swimmers to swim in the best pool in the country! I've been in a lot of pools in my time but I enjoyed swimming in the Indiana University Natatorium the most. Those of you who didn't come missed a great experience. We only hope that we might all enjoy another meet in Indianapolis at some future date.....

SWIMMING TRIVIA - The World's largest pool is the Fleischacker Pool on Sloat Blvd., San Francisco. It measures 1,000 ft by 150 ft (3.44 acres) and contains 7,500,000 gallons of water.....

The first competition in swimming is supposed to have taken place in London in 1837..... The Games of 1912 represented the first Olympic swimming competition for women. The first U.S. female winner was Ethelda Bleibtrey in the 100 meter freestyle with a time of 1:13.6.....

SAMPLE WORKOUTS (Spagetti and Meatballs) - These workouts are a fun change of pace from the straight set routine. Rest only enough to read and remember the next item. To decipher the code send two box tops to "Decoder Ring...".....
