USA NATIONAL PUBLICATION FOR MASTERS SWIMMERS

OCTOBER 1984

United States Masters Swimming, Inc. CONVENTION

Our thirteenth convention took place at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Indianapolis, Indiana on September 19-22, 1984. Our 1985 convention will be held at the Phoenix Hilton in Phoenix, AZ on or about the 12 - 15 of September, 1985. Mark your calendars. And, speaking of calendars, the 1986 SC Nationals will be held in Ft. Pierce, FL on May 15-18 and the LC Nationals will be held in Portland, OR on Aug. 21-24.

How about the 1984 convention? Wasn't the hospitality the greatest? Mary Lee Watson was responsible for all that good food and beverages. And then there were all those pieces of paper being shoved at us constantly. Everyone re-writing everything and Bill Tingley knew just where the copy machine was located and was kept busy running back and forth. It was so nice to have the best pool facilities in the country at our disposal - and for free! Our thanks to Mel Goldstein for setting up that privilege and for providing doughnuts and coffee for after our swims. There was something in the air in 'Naptown' and many of us were slightly under the weather. My doctor - Ross Lambert - said I most likely had a 12 hr virus. But it isn't nice to be sick away from home and miss meetings! However, our meetings were slightly lengthly, thanks to the four horsemen (Lawyers) - Mike, Dan, Jack, Kevin. Me protests they talketh too much! And on to awards. The 'rotten apple' award goes to the barefooted Mike Murphy. The 'polished apple' award goes to the well dressed Barr Clayson. The Ransom J. Arthur award was again presented to Reg Richardson along with a terrific slide show narrated by Mike Laux and assembled by Kevin Kelly. How can we do better next year? It will be a hard performance to top. We had a few hands making different things during the meetings along with the most serious Tom Boak and the ever smiling Art Mayer. Many meeting were taped. Now we have to wait for Dorothy Donnelly to interpret the tapes. What will she do with the tape that was used twice? Hopefully, there was nothing important that was lost.

Robert Helmick of the United States is the newly elected president of FINA (Federation International de Natation Amatuer). He has named Tina Martin to head up his newly formed commission on MASTERS SWIMMING. He spoke at our meeting and tried to clarify FINA's position on Masters Swimmers. There is a section in the FINA rule book on Masters Swimming stating the minimum age limit of 25 years. It is closed to any amateur or professional 24 years of age or younger and any amateur 24 years of age or younger who competes in Masters competitions shall forfeit his amateur status. BUT, any amateur 25 or older will not forfeit his amateur status and may compete in open amateur competition being registered for both USS and USMS. This rule and the following rule changes will become effective Jan. 1, 1985.

And so with the above clarification, Masters Swimming will not have an official age grouping of 20-24 year olds, now will our relay ages be changed. However, we will recognize that age group whenever FINA does. We can still have our younger age group on the local level and we can register them.

We added the 1000 yard freestyle and the 800 mtr freestyle to our list of events. They will not be held in our National Championships.

The meet director may deck seed relays at the Nationals. The National Meets shall pay $2 per swimmer to USMS and $1 will be refunded upon compliance to their contract. The Championship patch shall be awarded to individual and relay winners. (Continued on page 13)

National Championships

Hill Carrow writes that there were 750 participants in the 1984 USMS LC National Championships held in Raleigh, NC from 44 state and 4 foreign countries. Hill was meet director and Leslie Milam was asst. meet director. The meet was hosted by the Raleigh Area Masters Swim Team and the local Masters Swim Committee for North Carolina in cooperation with the City of Raleigh Parks and Recreation Department.

SWIMMING IN A LITTLE POOL WITHOUT LANES: A SHORT COURSE IN SURVIVAL

Being a big fish in a small pond isn't all it's cracked up to be. This great revelation came to me in my health club pool as I was being sideswiped by a wildly flailing breaststroker while trying to avoid colliding with a portly man who was drifting contemplatively about the deep end. It's not that I'm so big, but the pool is only 35 feet by 17 feet (or 15 feet, the club's receptionist isn't sure; at first she told me it was 6 feet, but she must have confused depth with width).

When I joined the club, it was with the vague idea of becoming fit. Suddenly everyone I knew was into jogging, tennis or weightlifting. I pictured myself lithe and muscular, smiling broadly as I did my workout, singing in the steam room.

But, by the time I took my postswim shower, I was often swearing under my breath and scowling. Sometimes my adrenaline was coursing because I'd had a run-in with someone who'd suddenly been inspired to practice water ballet in my lane. Sometimes I had scratches on my arms or legs from skirmishes with antisocial swimmers.

Because I concentrated on swimming only after I'd joined the club and discovered that Nautilus machines were boring and treadmills stupefying, I hadn't paid much attention to the size of the pool. Swimming took me by surprise and soon became an addiction. My skin grew soft from immersion, and I became as engrossed with finding goggles that didn't leak as doing the crawl right.

A friend had demonstrated the stroke, lying with the lower half of his body on the bed, his upper half projecting perilously over the floor. "It's like rolling over barrels," he'd said obscurely, and as I swam, I repeated his words as if they were a mantra, kicking as fiercely as I could so that no one would get in my way.

Many pools have lanes marked by stripes on the bottom. In my pool, though, the concept of lanes was entirely subjective. While the path I made from one end of the pool to the other constituted what I thought of as a lane, it was clear that it existed in my mind alone and only the force of my own conviction could make it real to someone else.

Some swimmers seemed to share my vision; their actions showed that they, too, operated on the assumption that lanes existed, imaginary or not. These swimmers were immediately recognizable because they didn't enter the pool if no "lanes" were available; instead, they stood resolutely on the deck, twirling their goggles, waiting to claim the first free "lane." They could also be distinguished by the fact that once in the pool, they remained there a long time, and their paths delineated a perfectly straight line.

But while these swimmers followed an unwritten code of honor, as far as everyone else was concerned, anarchy reigned. To some, the pool was simply an invitation to romp and splash. To others, it was a place to go to cool off after the Jacuzzi. But the majority actually tried to swim—or at least to stay afloat. They blithely swam every which way but were outraged if anyone got in their path.

Before long, I'd catalogued the various types who frequented the pool. There were the social butterflies, who stood in the shallow end, laughing and gossiping and rarely, if ever, got their hair wet. They were wholly unimpressed with the fact that what they were in was a swimming not a standing pool. Then there were the dilettantes, who surface-dived like inept porpoises, essaying a few strokes now and then, sometimes with water weights strapped to their arms and legs. Often as not, they would swim the width of the pool rather than the length and, consequently, were almost impossible to avoid. When you bumped into them, they'd give you a spacey look as if you'd interrupted a deep, involved reverie, and then paddle dreamily on.

The fighters, on the other hand, would sooner scratch you than allow you to get within a yard of their thrashing selves. This group was made up of those who dealt with the water as though they were doing battle and had to pound it into submission. Clearly out of their element, they remained afloat by a sheer act of will, and their wake was composed of such turbulent and towering waves that whenever you turned your head to breathe, you'd get a mouthful of water.

There were times, when the pool wasn't crowded; occasionally, it was actually deserted. I was ecstatic when I had the pool to myself, and I'd emerge relaxed and comfortably weary. But this didn't happen often enough. When I'd least expect a crowd, there they'd all be—the social butterflies, the dilettantes, the fighters—a pool teeming with trouble. It was impossible to discern a pattern, or to outwit the crowds by arriving early in the morning or in the middle of the afternoon. In fact, conditions were so erratic, I decided attendance must have something to do with people's moods—or maybe even the phases of the moon.

Never knowing what to expect, I psyched myself up during my walk to the club, braced to do battle if I had to. And then one day it occurred to me that I wasn't getting only hydrotherapy when I swam, but psychotherapy as well. Though I'd never been an aggressive type (and found anger hard to express), swimming had uncovered a well of inner rage, which I vented with a surprising lack of inhibition. Whether I had to shout, kick or splash, I'd resort to whatever was necessary to get my laps in. Swimming was teaching me to be assertive.

Cheered by the thought of this extra benefit, I began to regard my swims as a challenge. Once when a glowering woman got in the pool at the opposite end and started swimming straight toward me, I deliberately collided with her, lowering my head like a bull. When we crashed with a loud thwack, she let out an indignant yell. "Hey, watch where you're going, lady!" I shouted. "You're in my lane! I'm trying to swim laps!"

She looked confused, and I realized that to her my "lane" was about as real as the emperor's clothes. But before she could ask, "What lane?" I'd swum to the end and was heading back to where she stood. My ferocity seemed to cow her; she gave me a dirty look and got out of the pool. Did I feel guilty? No, I felt vindicated and triumphant.

Dealing with the fighters demanded more cunning. I eventually discovered that if one got too close, all I had to do was stick out a leg and accidentally on purpose rake him or her with my toenails. Effective, but it meant growing my nails so long that they tore my socks.

It took a while to acquire the various skills that doing laps required. But I was obsessed. I became adept at shouting when I turned my head to breathe and at kicking so violently others hesitated to come near. I learned that looking fierce is as important as actually being ferocious. I acquired bluster and smarts. I became a bully.

But when the time came to renew my annual membership in the club, I decided I'd become assertive enough. I imagined what it would be like to swim in a bigger pool (Olympic-sized, with real lanes!), and I knew it was time to move on. In fact, I realized I'd been kidding myself just to get through the year. If combat training in being aggressive was what I really craved, all I had to do was go to Macy's during a clearance sale. Still, I had become more forceful, and even my friends mentioned they'd noticed the change. I no longer let people push ahead of me in supermarket lines, or stood politely by while others elbowed their way to seats on a crowded subway. When someone was rude to me—a churlish bank teller, say—I didn't cringe, but was rude right back. In short, I began to behave like a big fish in a small pond. Not only had I acquired muscles from swimming, I'd learned how to make waves. END

Convention continued: Our exception to USS Technical Rules allowed for false starts in 1984. However, in 1985 we will be using USS rules - ONE FALSE START DISQUALIFIES THE SWIMMER AND HE SHALL NOT BE PERMITTED TO SWIM THAT EVENT.

At the 1985 USMS Convention in Phoenix, AZ, the House of Delegates will hold elections for the offices of USMS President, Vice Pres., Secretary and Treasurer. Those who wish to nominate candidates for these offices should make submissions in writing to the Zone/Nominating Committee. Submissions must be received on or before April 1, 1985, and should be directed to Gail Dummer, Dept. of Health and P.E., 132 Intramural Cir. Build., Michigan State U., East Lansing, MI 48824.

We hope that by next year Ham and Mildred Anderson can work out an amicable solution to their one vote. It seems that Mike Laux, on the request of Ham, gave them each one/half vote!

The Alabama delegation held a Joke Off contest. It was won by a lovely synchro swimming lady named Linda. She was challenged by our Reg Richardson. After counting the votes of three independent voters (voting 1 to 10) for a series of 10 jokes, Reg came out the winner by a mere one point! Congratulations Reg!

Using music in swimming

By PAUL JERNBERG JR.

Swimming speed can be understood as a function of distance per stroke and stroke tempo. An awareness of these two components can be used to improve performance in the sport.

There are three assumptions from which we must begin: 1) swimming performed rhythmically is more efficient than arhythmic swimming; 2) swimmers can develop an awareness of, and internalize the ability to swim at, specific tempos, in varying degrees of precision; and 3) the effect of increased tempo on distance per stroke is dependent upon the power of the swimmer (i.e., more power will mean less negative effect).

In preparation for the "musical method," a swimmer needs to become skilled in integrating the components of minimum strokes per length and stroking at a variety of specific tempos. The following drill is one way to achieve this integration:

The coach uses a metronome to set a slow tempo that is communicated to the swimmers (underwater speakers are helpful, although other means can be improvised), who are instructed to swim to the beat in as few strokes as possible for one length. For each tempo it is important to specify the exact metronome marking to the swimmers, so that they can develop an awareness of specific stroking tempos. Gradually, the metronome is accelerated, and for each successive tempo the swimmers are challenged to minimize their number of strokes per length. The unavoidable increase in strokes per length can be a source of challenge if tempos and strokes are recorded, so that progress can be worked on and measured over a period of weeks.

Many supplemental ways may be devised in which swimmers can develop their ability to perceive and perform various tempos. To the accompaniment of a good metronome they can stroke out of water, perform calisthenics, walk run, jump, lift weights and visualize swimming to the beat, in the process learning to distinguish different tempos and the feelings associated with each.

As the swimmer develops the above skills, he will be able to begin using the musical method to achieve a desired race time (Table 1). By determining a time allowance for start and turns, a goal number of strokes per length (set within attainable limits) and a desired race time, the swimmer can determine the exact tempo (or tempos) required for his race.

He then can get to know his race in the same way that a musician or dancer knows his performance before appearing on stage, through a vivid imagination of the vital components. (Here again the metronome can be a valuable tool.) In the water he can swim segments of the race at tempo, and swim the entire distance at slightly lower tempos. With a tempo, he can internalize an appropriate accompaniment. As the above skills become automatic the swimmer will be prepared to swim his goal race with a great deal of confidence.

A hidden element to this method must be experienced to be understood—the power of music to support and inspire movement. Even the clicking of a metronome can communicate a measure of this power. Possibly the best example of it is the relationship between dancers and their musical accompaniment—imagine a ballet, waltz, square dance or disco without a musical beat. However, since the swimmer's beat must be internalized, it may be more appropriate to compare him to an unaccompanied pianist, who without external stimuli is in a sense "carried through" the technically difficult passages by the music flowing through his mind and body. As a pianist, swimmer and coach, I believe this same kind of musical energy can be tapped to achieve great performances and to break new barriers in the sport of competitive swimming.

Paul Jernberg Jr., recently head coach of the Portage (Mich.) Muskies Swim Club, is an assistant men's swimming coach at Arizona State University. Jernberg is a pianist with professional experience in ballet, opera and musical comedy.
